MAY LAY FORMAL ASSAULT CHARGE

Squire Lilly Refuses to Confirm or Deny Report that Information has been Laid before him Charging Officer Emmons with Assault.

Word has been received in Gettysburg that information has been laid before a McSherrystown justice of the peace bringing a charge against Chief of Police Emmons of Gettysburg. It is supposed that the charge is one of assault and battery following an affair on Nixon Field Wednesday afternoon when Emmons struck "Kid" Scherdel, a Hanover player.

Mr. Emmons was advised from Hanover that the information was to be laid. Squire Rice, of McSherrystown, denied that any action had been laid before him, while Squire Lilly refused to confirm or deny the report.

Chief of Police Emmons has been suspended without pay for ten days by Burgess Eicholtz. It is said that several Hanover players and fans had been guying Emmons during the afternoon and that, when it was continued after the game, Emmons struck Scherdel who was standing on the running board of a machine. Burgess Eicholtz has issued this statement in connection with the affair: To the citizens of Gettysburg.

I have suspended Policeman Emmons for ten days, without pay, as punishment for having struck a man who was ridiculing him while on duty.

I will allow no display of temper by the officers under me, and will promptly punish any breach of conduct on the part of the borough policemen.

On the other hand the preservation of peace and order requires that the officers of the law be treated with respect, and to publicly subject the policemen to gibes, ridicule and guying can have no other effect than to lower the efficiency of the officers and thereby endanger the peace and order of the Borough.

For this reason I have instructed the officers to arrest all persons who publicly guy and ridicule them while on duty, and to bring the offenders before me on the charge of disturbing the peace.

J. W. EICHOLTZ, Burgess.

During Mr. Emmons' suspension Officer Smiley will be acting chief, and A. V. Weikert will be the night officer.

JOSEPH H. LeFEVRE

Funeral will be Held in Littlestown on Friday.

Joseph Henry LeFevre, formerly of Littlestown and Gettysburg, died at his home in Hanover on Wednesday morning aged 76 years, 4 months, and 6 days. He had been in failing health for several years and was taken seriously ill on Tuesday night.

He was born near Littlestown, and after being graduated from Franklin and Marshall College studied law in the office of the late Judge William McClean. He was admitted to the bar but never practiced and spent the greater part of his life in the insurance business at Pittsburgh, Littlestown, and Hanover, also being employed by the Cordage Company at Hanover.

He leaves his wife and eight children, two sisters, and a brother, Enoch LeFevre, of Littlestown.

Funeral from his late home Friday morning at ten o'clock. Interment at Mt. Carmel cemetery, Littlestown.

APHTHOUS FEVER

Nearly Eight Hundred Farms in Thirty-four Counties Affected.

Over 15,000 head of cattle and more than 13,000 head of swine had to be destroyed in the outbreak of foot and mouth disease which has just about come to an end in Pennsylvania, and by the time the federal and state governments pay the bills for cattle, and property taken to check the disease, it is estimated that the cost will run over $1,350,000.

The disease, which began in 1914, prevailed on 788 farms in thirty-four counties. The previous outbreak, which occurred in 1908, affected 100 farms in thirteen counties. Lancaster was the worst sufferer with Berks next.

NEW POST OFFICE FOR NEW OXFORD

Brick and Stone Structure will Add Much to Appearance of Centre Square and Provide Suitable Quarters for Office.

With the razing of the Warner Building located on the public square at New Oxford, the residents are witnessing the demolishment of the oldest building in the town. They recall the many merchants who conducted stores of various kinds within the building.

The building will be replaced with a modern up-to-date building which will greatly add to the attractiveness of the Square. It will be two stories high, of fire proof construction, made of buff colored brick with stone trimmings. When completed it will be used as a post office. The building is being erected by Postmaster Warner.

According to the most accurate history that could be compiled from interviews with the oldest residents the brick building, now being torn down, was erected in 1800 by William Sturgeon. At that time there were about twenty houses in New Oxford, the majority of them crude structures but one story and a half high, and among them there were only two brick buildings.

The Warner Building was first occupied by William Sturgeon who conducted a hardware store for many years. He was succeeded by George Everhart who opened a general store. This type of store was conducted in the building under the management of Jacob Wertz, Abraham Sheely, and J. C. Zouck.

In 1868, H. K. Schnell, who is now retired, occupied the building using the store room for hardware business. This seemed to change the trend of the building from the general store to the hardware business. In 1874, J. E. C. Miller, who at present has a large hardware store in New Oxford, occupied the Warner Building. Mr. Miller vacated in favor of McClian Gilbert, a hardware merchant, who is still in the same business.

James Barnitz then used the building for the Post Office. Then James Dicks opened a drug store.

STUNNED

Paul Reed, Visiting Brother, is Knocked Unconscious.

During the electrical storm Tuesday evening, Paul Reed received a shock which rendered him unconscious. Mr. Reed left McSherrystown to visit his brother at Edge Grove. While opening the gate, a bolt of lightning struck a nearby tree, throwing Mr. Reed to the ground. He was picked up in an unconscious condition, and hurried into the house.

Dr. A. C. Rice was hastily called and gave the necessary medical attention. The patient was later taken to the home of his sister in Brushtown. He has entirely recovered from the shock with the exception of a slight pain in his right arm.

Mr. Reed is from New Haven, Conn., and is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Levi Reed, McSherrystown.

RESIGNS

Will Take Charge of Larger Lutheran Congregation.

Rev. Charles S. Bream, formerly of Gettysburg, pastor of the Albion Lutheran charge, composed of St. Mark's, of Albion, Ohio, Rehoboth and Mt. Pleasant Lutheran churches, resigned Sunday to become effective August 1, 1915, for the purpose of accepting a call to become the pastor of the Lutheran church at Middlebury, Ohio.

HANKS QUITS AS LEAGUE UMPIRE

Succeeds Laughlin as Manager of the Hagerstown Team. Another Regular Umpire is at once Appointed. Hanks will Play.

Following a contention with President Boyer, of the Blue Ridge League, Joe Laughlin, manager of the Hagerstown team, resigned Wednesday night.

Within an hour after Laughlin's resignation had been accepted, Eugene Hanks, who has been one of the league umpires during the season, resigned his position as umpire and accepted the managership of the Hagerstown team. He will likely play one of the infield positions.

The resignation of Laughlin did not come as a great surprise to many fans, as it is known that there had been some friction in the past few weeks with the league president, concerning the management of the team. It reached its climax on Wednesday.

When interviewed Joe Laughlin had the following to say concerning his resignation:

"I have never been manager of the local team, but merely 'manager in name only.' I have been working under the direction of Mr. Boyer, president of the league, who has given me my orders before each game. I have signed but two players on my present team—they were Troy and Cook."

President Boyer made the following statement:

"Joe Laughlin handed me his resignation and I immediately accepted it, and also appointed Eugene Hanks, who has been one of the umpires, to fill the vacant position. 'Gene' can play any position from catcher, pitcher, infielder or outfielder. He is a good all around man. I have appointed Cleary, who has been umpiring in the Inter-State League, of New York, as umpire to take Hanks' place."

At one time Wednesday, seven of the Hagerstown threatened to strike and leave the club, but after a little talk they changed their minds.

HAVE MANY BOOKS

Officers Chosen for the Biglerville Library Association.

At a meeting of the Biglerville Library Association the following officers were elected to serve one year: president, Blake Fohl; secretary, Correne Deatrick; treasurer, Mrs. N. C. Thomas. The librarian was not chosen. It was decided to continue the same membership fee, 25 cents per year.

The association owns nearly three hundred books which are loaned to the members for two weeks. It also keeps care of fifty books belonging to the Pennsylvania Free Library Commission, which are free to any one applying for them.

The case is exchanged every six months. The library is located in the Thomas Building, and is open every Thursday evening from 7 to 8 where the librarians will be glad to receive new members as well as welcome the old ones.

TO REUNION

Reformed Church Gathering Takes a Number from here.

Fifty one tickets were sold at Gettysburg this morning for the Reformed re-union at Pen Mar. Among those who went were: Dr. T. J. Barkley, Miss Annie Hugus, Mrs. Theodore Kimple, H. T. Weaver, Maurice Weaver, Mrs. J. E. Butt and daughters, Sara and Amelia, John Pettis, Mrs. Charles High, Miss Margaret Murray, Miss Ruth Rentzel, and Rev. Stewart Hartman and family, of the Hoffman Orphanage, and about twenty of the children from that institution.

THREATEN LIFE OF MOVIE MAN

Popular Actor, well known in Gettysburg, Pays no Attention to Letters of Woman. Now Living in California.

An effort to kill Francis X. Bushman, the motion-picture actor, who has a number of relatives living in Gettysburg, was made in San Francisco, according to a dispatch received from that city. The attempt was made by a well-dressed woman, who evidently had been writing to the actor, but whose letters were unanswered.

The dispatch from San Francisco was as follows:

"The police are searching for a beautiful woman who is alleged to have made an attempt to kill Francis X. Bushman, an actor, at the St. Francis hotel. A package addressed to Bushman, was received at the hotel, and when it was opened it was found to contain a bomb, the fuse of which had burned to within an inch of the explosive.

"The package was left by a well-dressed woman. Bushman is in Los Angeles, so the package was opened by his advance agent, H. Reichenbach. In addition to the bomb the package contained a note, reading:

"God will join us in Heaven. You have failed to answer my letters. H. C."

S. M. Bushman and niece, Miss Mary Power, of Baltimore street, who are now on a trip to the Pacific Coast, expect to visit the popular moving picture actor at his home during their stay in California.

W. C. T. U. MEETING

Mrs. George Fohl Entertains Arendtsville Temperance Society.

The Arendtsville W. C. T. U. met at the home of Mrs. George Fohl Tuesday evening with a goodly number present including several honorary members.

The business part of the meeting consisted of the appointment of superintendents of the different departments by the president, report of the treasurer, and arrangements for a lawn social to be held the first Wednesday in August.

This period was followed by a literary program consisting of music by the union; reading, Mrs. M. E Knouse; recitation, Mrs. Alvis Minter; duet by Mrs. William Wolff and Miss Eva Jacobs; Mrs. A. I. Weidner read part of Mr. Hobson's speech delivered at the Anti-Saloon League convention; Mrs. Blanche Bushey read an article on the enormous amount of money, $2,000,000, being spent in one year for intoxicating liquor.

After lifting a very liberal offering and a selection of music the meeting adjourned to meet at the home of Mrs. Nellie Bushey the first Wednesday afternoon in August.

THOSE AEROPLANES

Say Race over Lincoln Road will really Take Place.

The Lincoln Highway Association publishes this bit of news: "Great interest is being taken in the transcontinental aeroplane race "over" the Lincoln Highway from New York to San Francisco, which is scheduled to be held some time this summer by the Aero Club of America. The Committee on Aeronautical Maps and Landing Places has under advisement the selection of landing places along the Lincoln Highway. Announcement of these points will be made later from the headquarters of the club, 297 Madison Ave., New York City."

SMALL MARKET

Comparatively Few Truckers Present on Thursday Morning.

Only eighteen market men appeared this morning about the Centre Square curb, the harvest season keeping many at home. The buyers were numerous as usual and there was no trouble in disposing of the fruits, vegetables, and produce.

ANNIVERSARY PROGRAM PLAN

Expect Large Crowd at Hoffman Orphanage for Annual Event. Children will Have Exercises. Meals Served on the Grounds.

The fifth anniversary of the Hoffman Orphanage, near Littlestown, will be held next Thursday, July 22. This institution is now caring for thirty children, and is under the control of the Potomac Synod of the Reformed church.

Rev. Dr. W. F. More, of Womelsdorf, will be the speaker. As the superintendent of Bethany Orphans Home, Dr. More has made a special study of child needs. He will speak from his experience with dependent children, and will delight as did Judge Williams last year, all who hear him.

Pantomimes, drills, recitations and songs will be the contribution of the children of the Orphanage to the program. "The Star Spangled Banner" as pantomimed by Anna D. Cooper, which the children gave at the Reformed re-union at Pen Mar to-day will be given at the anniversary.

Each year more people attend the anniversary. The management has been notified of the coming of automobile parties, from almost every large town within fifty miles.

Dinner will be served at 11:30 a. m., and refreshments can be secured on the grounds. The program will begin at 1:30 p. m.

Conveyances will meet those who desire to be taken from Gettysburg or Littlestown to the Orphanage, and will leave Gettysburg at 9:30 a. m., Littlestown from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m.

Willing to Go Half Way.

Frank had been going to school but a week when he had some trouble with the janitor. The teacher took Frank to the janitor and said: "Now, Frank, I am sorry you and Jerry have had any trouble, but just to show Jerry that you are willing to be friends I want you to shake hands with him." Frank hesitated and then grumbled, "I'll give him my left hand."

THAW IS SANE BUT NOT FREE

The Jury Returns Verdict in His Favor.

BUT JUDGE MUST DECIDE

Reserves Final Judgment on Action of Jurors, Who Were Advisors of Justice Hendrick.

New York, July 15.—Harry K. Thaw won the first very important victory in his nine years of fighting for freedom when a jury which, since three weeks ago last Tuesday, has been listening to testimony regarding his present sanity, brought in a verdict that Thaw now is sane.

What the jury decided is of value only inasmuch as it may or may not influence Supreme Court Justice Peter A. Hendrick. It is for Justice Hendrick to say next whether Thaw should be released from custody or sent back to Matteawan. Justice Hendrick may, if he wishes, discard the jury's opinion and say that Thaw still is insane. The jury in the present hearing is merely an advisory body.

As soon as the proceedings were disposed of Thaw's mother rushed over to him and kissed him on both cheeks. His sister, Mrs. Carnegie, also congratulated him. Then the crowd gathered around Thaw and pressed forward to shake his hands.

Thaw's chief counsel, John B. Stanchfield, immediately after the jury filed in and said that in their opinion Thaw is now sane, moved that Thaw be released from custody that moment. Justice Hendrick thereupon said that he would make his final decision later.

Justice Hendrick and the lawyers, for and against Thaw's release, will meet Justice Hendrick in his chambers. Mr. Stanchfield will then again ask that the commitment by Justice Dowling of Thaw to Matteawan in 1908 be declared void and Thaw set free. Deputy Atorney General Becker is expected to oppose this.

It is thought that Justice Hendrick, no matter what he may have to say to the lawyers privately regarding his decision, will not until Friday forenoon make a formal public announcement as to whether or not he thinks Thaw should be or not be freed. What Justice Hendricks says then will be final—Thaw may pick up his hat and walk uptown a free man at Justice Hendrick's say so, or if the justice so decides he will go back to Matteawan.

But from the cheers and handshakes, the handclapping and general hurrah inside and outside of the county court house, one gathered that about 2000 Thaw fans at least labored under the mistaken notion that the jury's decision meant freedom for Thaw. Straw hats were smashed in the wild press of humans who wanted to shake Thaw's hand. Movie operators perched high on the courthouse steps steadily clicked their cameras. Battalions of newspaper camera men fell over one another as they backed through the cheering crowds to snap Thaw again and again when he left the courthouse in triumph.

DOCTOR HELD AS SPY

Wheeling Physician on Motor Tour Arrested In Canada.

Wheeling, W. Va., July 15.—Dr. A. L. Coyle, a prominent physician of this city, is being held in Toronto, Can., as a German spy, according to a hastily scribbled post card received by Dr. J. M. S. Heath, a friend of Dr. Coyle's, at Bellairs. The card, which bore the Toronto postmark, read:

"I am in jail as German spy. Please send credentials from Wheeling."

Efforts were at once made to get into communication with Dr. Coyle at Toronto. Dr. Coyle and Carl Laing, a banker, left last Saturday for an automobile trip through Canada. Nothing had been heard from them until the arrival of the post card.

Children In Blazing Tent.

Scranton, Pa., July 15. — Frances Chievers, two years old, was fatally burned and her sister Muriel, seven years old, seriously, when a garden tent in which they were playing at their home in Peckville, caught fire from a lighted candle in the hands of a third child. Frances Chievers died in the Midvalley hospital and Muriel is in a critical condition as a result of trying to save her sister.

Posse Kills Negro Murderer.

Macon, Ga., July 15.—A posse of citizens and county officers shot and killed Peter Jackson, a negro, accused of killing three white men near Cochran, Ga. The negro had barricaded himself in his home and defied the posse, which, according to reports received here, blew up the house with dynamite. Jackson, it was said, continued firing after his house was dynamited and he then was shot down.

Fall From Stack Kills Pugilist.

Norristown, Pa., July 15.—Jack Sullivan, lightweight pugilist, who for a number of years held the championship of Canada, was killed by falling from a stack upon which he was at work at Huntingdon. His body will be brought to his home in Bridgeport for interment.

Whistle for a Dog.

Any dog can be taught to answer a certain sound, and as it is far easier to produce a uniform sound on a metal whistle than by means of your lips, why not buy a whistle and train your dog to answer it.—It can be hung beside the door or carried in your handbag, so that you can always use it when the dog has wandered away. One can be bought for 30 cents that is quite satisfactory.

BERLIN PUZZLED BY U. S. STAND

Don't Believe Newspapers Reflect American Opinion.

Berlin, July 15.—The conflicting reports of the reception of Germany's note to the United States government concerning Germany's submarine warfare still keep a majority of the newspapers from commenting on it.

Exceptions to the rule are the Kreuz Zeitung, the Tages Zeitung and the Boersen Zeitung, which express the belief that British and French news agencies have purposely selected unfavorable editorial expressions from American newspapers for the sake of the effect they will have in Great Britain and France.

The Kreus Zeitung says: "Regarding the reception of the German note in America, several additional reports from British sources are at hand Reuter's Telegram company presents about a dozen short sentences from as many American papers. Were these really approximately a faithful picture of the thought of the American press as a unit, we should have to discard every hope of a possibility of an understanding. The conception of a great majority of the German people is that we showed in our note an earnest desire to meet as far as possible justified American interests."

The Kreuz Zeitung reproduces the editorials quoted by Reuter, but draws consolation from the admission of the London Times that there is little indication that a crisis exists, and that there is no talk of war. The newspaper reviews again the alleged advantages of the note which it thinks will be accepted even if the proposals have to be altered slightly.

RUMANIA MAKES DEMANDS

Bucharest Government Transmits Counter Proposals to Vienna.

Berlin, July 15.—In reply to the demands made upon Rumania by Austria, the Bucharest government has transmitted to Vienna counter demands for the cession of certain territory now forming part of the Austrian empire.

The indications are that the negotiations are to be of considerable length, but that an effective compromise will be reached.

Count von Reventlow, writing in the Tages Zeitung, urged Austria to grant the nationalization requests of the Rumanians in Austria, partly to prevent agitation in Rumania and partly as a reward for their loyalty during the war.

THREE DEAD IN EXPLOSION

Many Others Hurt In Gas Blast at Cambria Steel Plant.

Johnstown, Pa., July 15. — Three men are dead and eight or nine others are injured as a result of an explosion at the benzol plant of the Cambria Steel company. No names can be obtained.

One man was overcome by gas in a stack. Another went to his rescue and also was overcome. Then the men started to demolish the stack.

An explosion of gas resulted. A third man was killed and it was here that the other men were injured. All of the injured were taken to the Cambria hospital.

Say Italians Lost 80,000.

Berlin, July 15.—Italian losses on the Isonzo river front are semi-officially estimated here at 80,000 killed, wounded and missing. The Overseas News agency states that letters received from the Austro-Italian front confirm the report of cruelties committed by the Italian soldiers.

Arrest Alleged Spies.

London, July 15.—Two alleged spies were arrested and will be tried by a court martial on the charge of attempting to communicate information about the British fleet. The announcement was made by the British official press bureau.

CROWN PRINCE PUSHED BACK

Driven Out of Positions Captured In Argonne.

THOUSANDS MOWED DOWN

Berlin Claims Capture of 2581 Prisoners In Fight—Arras and Soissons Shelled.

London, July 15.—The French declare their front in the Argonne forest, after being dented by a violent attack made by the army of Crown Prince Fdederick William, has been restored, the net result being a costly adventure for the Germans.

The strength of the offensive at this point leads the British press to speculate whether the Argonne or the Woevre districts will not be selected for a general German offensive rather than the battle grounds in Flanders.

The German official statement announces that the German forces captured French positions in the Argonne for a width of three kilometers (1.8 miles) and for a depth of one kilometer (⅝ of a mile), and that they also stormed Hill 285. The Germans assert they made 2581 prisoners, took two field cannon and made eight cannon useless.

The fighting in Belgium and French Flanders continues. Arras and Soissons, the latter on the Aisne, have been violently bombarded by heavy German guns.

The army of the crown prince attacked in great strength the French positions along the road from Binarville to Vienne-le-Chateau (part of East St. Menehould) as far as La Haute Chevauchee, and by the use of asphyxiating bombs succeeded in driving the French troops from a portion of their trenches.

As soon as the gas fumes had cleared, however, the French troops delivered a counter attack and threw the Germans back to their original positions, according to the French war office report.

This report says a great many German troops were employed in the attack and that it was pushed with great vigor. Five regiments of the Sixteenth Army corps, under the crown prince, were recognized in the fighting.

Monday night the Germans, following their victory at the Souchez cemetery, hurled an enormous number of shells into the French positions in the "labyrinth," south of Neuville St. Vaast, later charging in great numbers. The onrushing troops were trapped in the open by the French machine guns and rifle fire, and were mown down by hundreds. Their losses were so great that the survivors fell back and did not attempt to renew the attack.

AUSTRIA SOUNDED SERBIA

Rome Says Dual Monarchy Tried to Make Peace.

Rome, July 15.—A semi-official announcement published in Rome to the effect that when Italy's entrance into the conflict appeared inevitable Austria-Hungary first attempted to make a separate peace with Serbia, and then tried to conclude an armistice, which would allow her to remove her troops from the Serbian frontier, is causing a deep impression in Italy.

Although these negotiations only leaked out in the semi-official announcement, considering the caution of the Italian foreign office, it is taken by the Italian press to indicate that the Italian government possesses the proofs of its assertions.

ITALIAN ARMY GAINS

Take Two Miles of Austrian Trenches After Scaling Heights.

Geneva, Switzerland, July 15.—The Italians have captured two miles of Austrian trenches in the Carnic Alps, according to a dispatch received by the Tribune from Villach, an Austrian town on the river Drave, fifty-two miles northwest of Laibach.

The Alpine troops, these advices say, dragged their artillery to the heights near Roskofel, which is situated at an altitude of 6600 feet.

The Italians also are said to have captured two important ports south of Gorizia.

Boom In Steel Castings.

South Bethlehem, Pa., July 15. — The demand for locomotives by belligerent nations of Europe has caused a sudden boom in the steel casting business of the Bethlehem Steel company, said Vice President Austin Mixsell. A recent order from a locomotive company was for castings for more than twenty-five locomotives.

Ignored Safety Gates; Killed.

Stroudsburg, Pa., July 15.—While crossing the railroad tracks at Mount Pocono, Meyer Smick, one of the department heads of the Simon Long store, of Wilkes-Barre, was struck by a milk train and instantly killed.

General Hildebrandt Killed.

Sedalia, Mo., July 15.—Word was received by Carl Hildebrandt of the death of his brother, Lieutenant General George Hildebrandt, of the German army, in battle on July 3. No particulars were given.

AUSTRIANS ROUTED IS GENEVA REPORT

Archduke's Army Said to Have Been Cut Off.

London, July 15.—The mystery that has fallen over the military situation in southern Poland, where official reports from both sides record no serious fighting, and General von Mackensen and his vast army have dropped from view after their tremendous successes, was deepened by an unofficial dispatch from Geneva, which declared the Austrians had been so severely defeated that the whole advanced line was in danger.

According to this dispatch, the communications of the Archduke Joseph Ferdinand's army had been cut, and it had become impossible to get supplies to it. The archduke, it said, was going to Cracow for a council of war, as reinforcements which were being rushed to the front were unable to check the Russian advance.

An equal mystery is the persistent silence maintained by Field Marshal von Mackensen, who, apparently, is making no effort to resume the German advance on Warsaw.

Petrograd reasons that his inaction is due to the fear that von Mackensen's flank would be exposed while the Austrians were on the defensive But a suggestion is made by London observers that the brilliant German military commander is planning an unexpected coup.

U. S. TO AID PACKERS

To Make Representations to Britain For Release of Meat Cargoes.

Washington, July 15.—After conferences with representatives of leading American meat packers, state department officials said formal representations would be made to Great Britain for the release of meat cargoes detained by the British naval authorities. The character of the representations has not been decided.

The packers complained that despite assurances of expedition of their cases before the British prize court, not one of their cargoes had been released so far.

They said thirty-one American, British and other ships, carrying the American meat products consigned to the Scandinavian countries, were being held up.

Massachusetts' Population 3,646,768.

Boston, July 15.—The population of Massachusetts is 3,646,768, according to preliminary figures issued by Charles F. Gettemi, director of the state bureau of statistics. This is an increase of 8.3 per cent in the last five years.

Middies at Colon.

Violin Makers.

In the French school of violin making the art was not practiced generally until the eighteenth century. The French were rather more skillful as imitators of the Italians than as originators, and the most famous of these early French makers was Nicolas Lupot, who copied Stradivarius almost exclusively. The German school never got very far in its success. Jacob Stainer standing at the head of the makers of that country.

To Kill a Cat.

The most merciful way of destroying cats is to chloroform them. Draw an old sock over the cat's head, so that the toe is brought not quite to its nose. Pour a teaspoonful of chloroform on to the sock close to the cat's nose. Almost as soon as the animal begins to be frightened it will doze off. Twice more soak the end of the sock, and the cat will not wake again.

TAKE ANOTHER FROM HANOVER

Fast Exhibition when Gettysburg Gets still further Revenge and Hornets are Made to Drop into Third Place.

It was surely Gettysburg Day on Nixon Field Wednesday afternoon when the Patriots, before one of the largest crowds of the season, took Hanover into camp again 4 to 1. Fast base ball marked the game which was started by Umpire Glatts after Howard and Herril were presented with five dollar gold pieces for their work last Saturday.

Gettysburg made two double plays. In the second Eline, with one out, tried to make sceond on a foul caught by Jarosick but was easily caught. In the third, with the bases full and one out, another rattling double was effected, Bigler to Jarosick to Deal. Oyler's fine running catch and the fast work of Oyler and Bigler were also features while Herril continued his batting streak with an average of .750.

Hanover got their lone tally in the third. Grotey hit for two bases and went to third on Hostetter's bunt. Grotey scored on Sherman's hit, Hostetter taking second. Crawford flied out and Starr filled the bases with a hit. Then came the double that ended the inning.

In Gettysburg's half, Jarosick got a hit but was forced at second by Howard who took the middle station when Bigler hit safely. Howard scored on Newton's hit. Mahaffie and Deal were easy outs.

Another was added in the fourth. Basehoar hit for three and was scored by Herril. In the eighth Mahaffie drew his third base on balls and was sacrificed by Deal. Basehoar was passed and Mahaffie scored on Herril's hit. Oyler was passed, filling the bases and Basehoar scored on Jarosick's sacrifice fly. Howard struck out, ending the inning.

Hanover had numerous chances to score but either Howard would tighten or his fielders would give the gilt edged support required.

KAISER OFFERED TRUCE IN SUBMARINE WARFARE.

Reports Say United States Killed Plan; It Would Weaken Her Position.

A secret chapter of the diplomatic negotiations between Germany and the United States has been disclosed, according to the New York American.

After the president's first note to Germany on the Lusitania case, which seemed to demand the absolute cessation of the latter's submarine warfare, Germany indicated to the state department that on a certain condition she would entirely discontinue the operations of her submarines against merchantmen for two or three weeks.

The condition was that the United States employ the interim in sounding Great Britain on what she was willing to do to modify her blockade of Germany, particularly as to trade in foodstuffs with the United States.

The state department rejected the proposition. Secretary Bryan informed Germany informally this government could not look with favor on any suggestion that carried with it a condition that the United States obtain concessions from Great Britain.

Secretary Bryan gave as his reason the probability that Great Britain would reply that the United States was acting in behalf of Germany, and this would weaken the position of the United States in any negotiations which might follow, independently, with Great Britain.

On receipt of this information Germany refrained from making the proposal in a formal manner, and nothing further was done along that line.

It is to be understood, from the German view as it is known here, that Germany is probably willing to repeat its suggestion any time this government feels disposed to accept it, the American concludes.

IN LOVING REMEMBRANCE

In sad and loving remembrance of our dear daughter and sister, Gertie A. Eckert, who departed just one year ago to-day, July 15, 1915. Aged 16 years, 7 months, and 8 days.

Lonely the home and sad the hours.
Since our dear daughter is gone;
But ah! A fairer home than ours,
In heaven is now her own.
Then dear parents, weep not for her,
Your cares for her are o'er;
She with the ransomed now will sing,
Where parting is no more.
We hear her voice, no more on earth.
She's gone to join the heavenly throng,
Where all is peace, and joy, and love;
Farewell, dearest parents, farewell.
By her parents.
Dearest sister, thou hast left us,
Here on earth thy loss to mourn.
We thy gentle voice no more shall hear,
Nor thy loving smiles e'er greet us.
True, thou didst say before parting,
Weep not, sorrow not for me,
I'm going to a bright and happy home
Where I my God shall see.
Still 'tis hard to give thee up.
But then we know thou art where
Sin and sorrow are never known,
And thy soul is free from care.
By her sisters and brothers.

BALDWINS ARE IN $80,000,000 ORDER

Contract For High Explosives About to be Signed.

Philadelphia, July 15.—Only an understanding as to terms remains in the way of the signing of a contract to furnish $80,000,000 worth of shrapnel and high explosives to the allies, in which order the Baldwin Locomotive works will participate.

The restraining influence is said to be the arrangement of the terms of payment. Since the flood of war orders began to accumulate on this side it has been the custom of some foreign governments, especially Russia, to endeavor to make part payment in government notes and the balance in cash.

These terms have prevailed where the manufacturers agreed. In financial circles it is admitted that the American manufacturers and bankers hold the balance of power, however, as the warring nations have the money and we have the goods, as it is felt that the seller in this case is the one to dictate terms.

This being the case, the present contract has been held up some days pending a satisfactory financing of the big order, one of the largest to be placed in this country.

One report current was that the question of financing the order had the attention of Henry P. Davidson, of J. P. Morgan & Co., when he was in London, and the fact that Mr. Davidson is now on his way home gave the impression that the matter had been satisfactorily arranged. It could not be learned whether the order was for English or Russian account.

Bride Gets Poison Pen Letters.

Vineland, N. J., July 15.—Guests at the wedding of Miss Mildred Woods, of Vineland, and Carroll R. Doddridge, of Pottsville, Pa., were astounded following the ceremony when a story of a poison pen writer came to light. It was announced that she had received numerous communications impugning her character, and describing how brides were frequently kidnapped, tortured and sometimes murdered.

OPERATION CURES BAD BOY.

Surgeon Says Diseased Tonsils Made Him Run Away and Steal.

Max Standte of Passaic, N. J., fifteen years old, known for three years as Passaic's "bad boy," has been cured of his desire to run away and steal, according to Dr. F. F. C. Demarest, a surgeon there. Dr. Demarest has removed the lad's adenoids and tonsils and asserts that illness due to them had developed a criminal tendency in his patient.

Max, forsaken by father, mother and sisters because of his doings, has slept in outhouses and fields when not in jail for stealing.

Some time ago Max was found in a barn and taken to the hospital by the police was found to be suffering from diseased tonsils. The operation followed.

In the city court his father, on the word of Dr. Demarest, decided to take the boy home. They will report to Judge Costello each Friday night hereafter for two months.

SAYS TROOPS ARE DOPED.

Miss Addams Asserts That Men Refuse to Use Bayonet Unless Drunk.

Soldiers in the European war must be made drunk before they will obey commands for bayonet charges, was the amazing statement made by Jane Addams in a discussion of her experiences in the warring European countries in an address in New York.

Germans, French and English were specifically mentioned by her in this connection.

"Young men in these countries say, 'Ah, the bayonet charge! That is what we dread.'

"They give them beer in Germany, rum in the English army and absinthe in the French. They have to give them the dope, so to speak, before a bayonet charge is possible," said Miss Addams.

Pigeons Break Records.

A new world's record by homing pigeons was claimed by the Fort Worth Pigeon Fanciers' association when four birds liberated at New Orleans covered the 579 miles to Fort Worth in fourteen hours, maintaining an average of forty-one miles an hour, several miles faster than the best previous record.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Ty Cobb, American League's Heavy Hitter.

Ty Cobb of the Detroit Tigers is playing faster ball this season than ever before in his career. He is at the top of the list as a batter and as to base stealing he is in a class by himself. This season Ty Cobb alone has stolen more bases than Doyle, Merkle, Fletcher, Lobert, Burns, Snodgrass and Meyers, of the New York Giants, combined. And not so long ago the Giants were noted for their speed on the paths. And when one can outrange eight men there must be as much of a lapse on one side as there is greatness on the other. Cobb has stolen forty bases so far, and the eight Giants named have stolen thirty-six.

"Cobb," says a sporting writer, "could never steal as many bases in the National league as he is getting away with in his own circuit."

Perhaps not. And then again, perhaps yes. A stolen base to Cobb is merely a matter of traveling ninety feet. There may be a slight advantage, but no great edge with Archer, Bresnahan, Snyder, Gowdy, Meyers, Killifer, Dooin, etc., throwing against Schalk, Schang, Agnew, Cady, Ainsmith, McKee and others.

Flight of a Golf Ball.

Have you ever seen a test of the flight of a golf ball thrown by hand? If not, it may be surprising to know that it is almost impossible to throw a golf ball to carry 100 yards, and yet this flight is very easy with a mashie, writes A. W. Tillinghast in the Philadelphia Record. Some years ago, during the visit of the Oxford-Cambridge college team at Nassau a trial of throwing golf balls was made. John Lowe, captain of the visiting team, wagered that none could throw a ball across the pond which was in front of the then seventeeth green. The hole itself was one demanding a simple mashie or short iron, and yet no one succeeded in throwing the ball across the water, the carry of which was considerably less than 100 yards. It would have been quite posible to have thrown a stone across, but with the golf ball it was different, for it persisted in ducking in its flight. It is possible that a professional baseball player might succeed in covering 100 yards with the flight of a thrown golf ball, but it is an experiment which would be well worth watching.

A Great Shot Putter.

Larry Whitney, the intercollegiate champion at putting the shot, has signed a contract to coach the Penn State football team and therefore became a professional automatically.

Whitney is perhaps the most remarkable shot putter of his weight ever developed in this country. Despite the fact that he weighed just a few pounds more than half of what Ralph Rose and Pat McDonald did at the Olympic games at Stockholm three years ago, Larry "stuck" with the giants in the weight tossing event and finished a good third. About one year later Whitney surprised the athletic world by trimming McDonald at the national championships at Chicago.

Boxing In Minnesota.

The Minnesota boxing commission has taken a stand as to the number of clubs that will be permitted to operate in that state. The commission has decided that one club in each of the three cities—Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth—will be sufficient and if this can be carried out without any great kick, it will be a good thing for the game.

The commission has already passed upon the scale of weights, as follows: Paper, 108 pounds; bantam, 115; feather, 125; lightweight, 135; welterweight, 145; middleweight, 158; light heavy, 175, and heavyweight, over 175 pounds.

FRENZIED finance and the efforts of some modern churches to serve God and Mammon, form the theme of this unusually interesting story by the author of "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," and his wife. Gail Sargent, charming, young and handsome, comes out of the West and into the lives of rich and influential New Yorkers. A Napoleon of finance and the young rector of the richest church in Gotham are among the suitors for her hand. How she changes their aims, hopes, ambitions, and their lives makes a splendid story. BOMBS FOUND ON FOUR FREIGHTERS

None Exploded, However, on Ships From New York.

THEIR ORIGIN A MYSTERY.

Agent Returning From Havre Reports the Finding of Chemicals In Cargoes of Vessels Bearing Munitions For the Allies—Vain Hunt For Clews on Both Sides of Atlantic.

Attempts made to blow up four freight steamships sailing from New York for Havre in April and May by concealing bombs in the holds became known through the arrival of H. C. Hill, a passenger on the French liner Espagne, who was in Havre when two of the explosives were discovered. The vessels were all English freighters that had been chartered by the French line to carry auto trucks, tractors and munitions of war to Havre for the French government.

The first steamship was the Devon City, sailing on April 27, followed by the Lord Erne and the Cressington Court on April 29 and the Bankdale on May 8. These ships were loaded at the piers in South Brooklyn. In each case two bombs were placed on board in different parts of the ship amid the cargo, so that if one explosive missed fire the other might burst.

Mr. Hill, who handled one of the bombs found in an autotruck case at Havre on May 28, said it consisted of two metal cylinders covered with wax. One cylinder was filled with sulphuric acid and the other with some high chemical explosive, the idea being that the acid would eat through the metal and set the explosive off when the ship was in midocean. The second bomb on the Bankdale was found at Havre on May 30, hidden in a sack of wheat, where it would have been smothered even if it had exploded, Mr. Hill said.

Clews Sought In Vain.

French detectives at Havre searched the cargoes of all ships coming from United States ports because similar bombs had been found on the Cressington Court and the Lord Erne, which arrived there on May 17 and 18, respectively, but no clew could be found among the crews as to the manner in which the explosives had been placed.

Captain Proctor of the Devon City found two bombs wrapped up in paper on top of the cargo down No. 2 hold four days after leaving New York on April 27. He threw one of them overboard and kept the other as a souvenir after carefully removing the contents to avoid any mistakes later, he explained. Whoever had taken the bombs on board the Devon City did not have time to secrete them in the autotruck cases or wheat sacks.

The finding of these explosives on the four British freighters was reported to Washington from Havre, and the piers in South Brooklyn were visited by secret service agents to get some clew, but without success.

It was after the receipt of this message from Havre that stringent instructions were issued to the employees at the French line piers not to allow any strangers on board the liners on sailing day. This order referred also to the officers and crews of other vessels of the company that might be in port at the time, even though the men were in uniform. The agents of the Holland-American line issued similar instructions, and all the steamship companies prohibited any package being taken on board their ships without its first being opened on the pier for examination.

Washington Officials Silent.

The authorities in Washington requested that the finding of the bombs should not be made public, as it might serve to defeat the ends of justice in warning guilty persons.

Sir Courtenay Bennett, British consul general in New York, admitted that he had received a report of the bombs being secreted on the four steamships, but did not know if any clew had been discovered in Washington or Havre regarding the identity of the offenders.

Mr. Hill said that he was the European representative of an automobile company of Springfield, Mass., and had been in France for the last eight months with the allies.

"The finding of these bombs in the cargoes of the British steamships arriving from New York did not create so much excitement at Havre as it would have under normal conditions," he continued. "The war was brought very near to the French seaport by such incidents as two steamships being torpedoed and sunk within ten miles of the city, where the wrecks lie now, and the continuous arrival of the trains filled with the wounded from the front."

ARMOR LIKE THAT OF CAESAR

Austrians Have Both Back and Breast Plates, Just Like Old Romans.

Reviving the methods of the Roman legions under Julius Caesar, the Austrians are adopting back shields and breastplates. On the Alpine front some of their infantry use a portable steel screen, rectangular in shape, for protection against shrapnel shot and grenade splinters.

A quantity of these have been picked up in front of intrenchments north of Val Grande, where the Teutons suffered some losses.

The Man Who Dreams.

A noted man once said: "The man with imagination rules the earth." The man who dreams and imagines the highest ideals and then strives and does attain them—that is the man who is master of his life.

Verses Muenter Wrote on "When I Am Dead"

Among the effects of Erich Muenter, alias Frank Holt, who tried to kill J. Pierpont Morgan, was found a poem, "When I Am Dead," which he wrote a number of years ago and sent to his sweetheart, Leona Sansabaugh, now his widow, in 1908. Several verses follow:

When I am dead
Perhaps kind memory will lose
The sad mistakes I've often made
And hold the good—yes, let the best
Reveal itself as errors fade.
Oh, Lord my God, I toil each day
That I may have some good to stay,
But will the blunders, then forgot,
Give balm to those that now are not?

When I am dead
And broken, heartless sods of earth
Will mark where last I seemed to be;
Perhaps—I cannot know—there will
Be heard the voice of praise for me.
Oh, Lord my God, help me be strong
In trials much, in labors long!
For me, who live in hunger great,
All praises then will come too late.

When I am dead
If I the silence of the tomb
Could break, I would not think to stay
The eager hand or loosened tongue,
But sadly I to all would say,
"Beloved, flowers now you cast,
No fragrance to hours past;
Belated words of love and tears
Will never ease the broken years."

VANISHING GUNS FOR AMERICAN SUBMARINES.

Officials Reveal Plans After It Was Found That Germany Had Secret.

The navy department has just announced that hereafter disappearing guns will be mounted on all American submarines.

It developed that American naval experts secretly have been working on the submarine gun for more than two years and that plans were completed several months ago to mount such pieces on undersea craft.

It is understood that the department did not divulge the plans because officers were under the impression that the idea had not occurred to other navies.

The announcement was made after officials of the department had satisfied themselves that it would be useless to keep the fact secret longer, because Germany already is using such guns on the U type of submarines which are now operating against merchantmen in the so called war zone.

If the present plans of the navy experts are carried out submarines of the M type will be the first to receive the new guns. The gun carriages are mounted after the general type of the disappearing guns which have been used for many years on land fortifications.

They are built so that when the submarine reaches the surface a section of the deck may be shifted and the gun will rise immediately over the top. The mechanism is so perfect, it is said, that the gun may be raised, fired and lowered within a few seconds.

Each submarine will be protected by two three inch guns. One will be mounted fore and the other aft. By the use of these guns officials believe that submarines will be enabled to protect themselves from any light craft.

The M type of vessels, on which the guns will be tried out, are of about the same type as those being used by Germany in attacking merchant vessels. They are approximately 230 feet in length and displace 730 tons.

MUNITIONS ON MINNEHAHA.

Vessel on Which Bomb Exploded Carried Much Valuable War Material.

Whether or not it is ever proved that Erich Muenter, alias Frank Holt, placed the explosive on the Minnehaha which caused her to return to port, there is no proof necessary that it was a vessel literally filled with war munitions. Here are some of the things she carried:

2,800 cases loaded shrapnel shells.
1,723 cases loaded cartridges.
1,000 cases cordite.
1,400 cases trinitrotoluol. (This is a chemical of great force, which goes into high explosives.)
54 cases rifles.
826 cases empty projectiles.
4 cases firearms.
3,0ti plates spelter.
886 cases and bundles brass rods and sheets.
432 motortrucks.
1 motor ambulance.
230 horses.
18 cases auto parts.
160 cases magnetos.
6 cases fuses.
80 bundles copper wire.
54 plates zinc.
10 crates air guns.

ITALIAN KING COUNTS SHELLS

Victor Emmanuel Unawed as Sixteen Twelve-inch Shells Burst Near Him.

A soldier in a letter to his parents in Rome relates this incident of the Italian king's coolness under fire. Along with the general staff, the king had visited an outpost to see how operations were progressing. The news of his presence was communicated to the Austrians by a spy. They immediately fired sixteen twelve-inch shells at the spot, some exploding within 120 yards of the king and his officers.

His majesty counted the projectiles as they fell, and then sat down on the grass and penciled out an account "to show how much it had cost the Austrians to try to take the life of one man."

What Caused His Death?

An Arizona man set a trap for rats. A dog was caught in the trap and upset a can of gasoline. The dog's barking aroused a man, who took a lighted lamp into the room and lost his life in the explosion.

AIR RAID IMPERILS BANK OF ENGLAND

Zeppelins, Led by Autos, Get Near Heart of London.

HIT NOTED EAST END CHURCH

Airships Only Few Minutes From St. Paul's Cathedral, Houses of Parliament, Westminster Abbey and King's Palace—Ninety Bombs Kill Four, Injure Seventy and Cause Many Fires.

By mail have come details of the attack on London by German Zeppelins, particulars of which the British censor would not allow to be published in England or cabled to this country.

In all it would appear ninety bombs were dropped, apparently by airships, which, it is believed, were guided by spies in automobiles specially lighted. The raiders got within a mile of the Bank of England and St. Paul's cathedral and three miles of Westminster Abbey, Buckingham palace and the houses of parliament. They hit a church, a crowded theater, killed four persons, wounded seventy and set a few fires, but are thought to have proved that raids on London may be successful yet.

First Bombs at 10.30 P. M.

The German air raiders apparently reached land at Leigh-on-Sea, which is two miles from Southend. There they dropped five bombs about 10:30 p. m., but did little damage, as the explosives fell on the open downs near the town. They were next reported over Brentwood and from that town easily reached north London, only a few minutes' flight away. Stratford, which is well within the metropolis, was the subject of their attentions, but little property damage was done there, the bombs falling on waste land.

The raiders then continued their flight until they were over Dalston junction, a very important railway junction with a heavy night traffic of freight trains which necessitates many signal lights. Near the junction there is a marsh which marks the site of natural springs known from the days of the Romans, and instead of striking the railway lines most of the bombs fell in the marsh.

Swinging more to the east, the raiders scattered bombs over Shoreditch, which is on the edge of the city of London, and it was here that they accomplished the greatest damage to life and property, setting fire to several private residences and shops and killing four persons and injuring many others.

Crowded Theater Is Hit.

An incendiary bomb bounced from the roof of the Shoreditch Empire Music hall, leaving the place virtually unscathed, but causing a panic in the theater audience. A small house standing near the theater was burned, apparently by the bomb, which bounded from the roof. The most important structure hit was the ancient Church of St. Mary Whitechapel, right in the heart of the thronged East End. The spire was slightly cracked by an incendiary bomb.

Through Hoxton the zigzag course of the Zeppelins could be traced by a series of fires which they left in their track. Along Commercial road many business houses suffered. One of the luckiest escapes was that of a big whisky distillery. With its great vats of spirits and its storerooms filled with case goods it might have proved an easy victim for an incendiary bomb, but the lone bomb which struck the place went through a galvanized iron roof into a deep tank filled with water.

Most of the bombs used were of the incendiary type, and a few which did not explode have been examined by the British authorities. These are filled with tarred hemp soaked in coal oil. But evidence has been found showing that some of the shrapnel bombs of the type carried by aeroplanes were used.

Three Fall on Freight Depot.

Three incendiary bombs were dropped in the big freight station of the Great Eastern railway at Bishopsgate about half past 11. They came through the glass roof without shattering the glass, but cutting holes as smooth as if made with a glass cutter. Two of them started fires, which the workmen put out with buckets of water. The third was thrown into a pail of water before it had done any damage and taken to the police station as an exhibit.

The inhabitants of the poorer regions where the bombs fell were in an ugly mood, and many Germans had to be hurried to the police stations for protection. Two shops owned by Russian Jews were attacked by the crowd in the belief that the owners were Germans.

Next morning the only sign of a pursuit of the raiders was found in the mud flats off Leigh-on-Sea, where a British aeroplane was stuck fast in the mud after being compelled to descend on account of engine trouble.

Their course brought the Zeppelins within two or three miles of Woolwich Arsenal and also the Enfield factory, where great quantities of munitions are being made, and of the famous old Naval observatory and school at Greenwich, but no attack was attempted except at Enfield, and there the bombs fell wild.

Lemon Juice for Headache.

Lemon juice and water will very often give great relief in the case of a sick headache. A wineglass of lemon juice in a little water taken three times a day is also recommended for rheumatism.

George Randolph Chester

Having completed a course of instruction in his "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" stories, showing anyone who follows it how to become wealthy, George Randolph Chester now takes a new turn and shows his audience how to be good. In the new serial, "The Ball of Fire," which we have arranged to publish in installment form, Mr. Chester descants upon the modern tendency toward commercialism in everything, and especially that of making a business enterprise of a church.

It is a rapidly moving story with a well-defined romance centered largely around a beautiful western girl who visits her uncle in New York city. It is one of the best novels Chester has ever written and one you should not fail to read.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Thickness and Lusrte at Once

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy", thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

Cheap Fish-Glue.

A few cents invested in fish-glue will furnish a year's supply. Place a teaspoonful in the cup, half fill with water, simmer slowly on the back of the range; when of the consistency of double cream it is ready for heavy cementing, such as leather or wood. By adding a little water, it can be thinned and reheated an indefinite number of times. It is best to set the little "glue pot" in a dish of hot water for heating.

RUSH RELIEF TO MEXICO CITY

The Capital Reported Quiet as Trains Bring Food.

FOREIGNERS ARE PROTECTED

Carranza Forces Are Rapidly Organizing Government — Villa Troops Said to Be Sweeping Southward.

Washington, July 15.—State department advices from Mexico City reported that the capital was quiet, with absolute order prevailing and trains arriving from Vera Cruz with food supplies.

Stores and banks have not been reopened pending arrangements for currency circulation. Communication between the capital and Vera Cruz by rail and telegraph continued and the Carranza government departments are said to be under process of organization as rapidly as possible.

Consul General Shanklin cabled that General Gonzales had given the preference to provision trains over troop trains and that arrangements for soup kitchens to relieve the capital's destitute were progressing, with the hope that it soon would be possible to feed from 8000 to 10,000 persons daily.

Additional dispatches confirmed the report that the Carranza forces in control of the city had recaptured the water works from the retreating Zapata army and that danger of a water famine had been averted.

General Carranza in a message from Vera Cruz to his agents in Washington gave assurances that he had extended every protection to Mexicans and foreigners within the capital, and announced his intention to issue an amnesty law in the near future "in an endeavor to have those in error return to the true path."

In the meantime, activity of General Villa's forces in pressing a lively campaign toward Mexico City from the north, reports of which continue to reach Washington from several sources, indicates that the proposed amnesty will not be accepted by the most formidable of the forces opposed to Carranza.

In view of this situation, with the possibility that General Gonzales may be forced into another battle for possession of the capital with General Villa's army, there is little talk in Washington for the present of extension of moral support or recognition to any faction by the United States.

General Villa's Washington agent reports Villa still in control of Aguas Calientes. They announced further advices confirming previous dispatches that a second Villa force sweeping southward had captured Queretaro eighty miles from Mexico City, and cut off General Obregon's army from its base of supplies. The exact whereabouts of Obregon's army, however, has not been ascertained for several days.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—A curious crowd of neighbors invade the mysterious home of Judge Ostrander, county judge and eccentric recluse, following a veiled woman who has gained entrance through the gates of the high double barriers surrounding the place. The woman has disappeared but the judge is found in a cataleptic state. Bela, his servant, appears in a dying condition and prevents entrance to a secret door. Bela dies. The judge awakes.

CHAPTER II—Miss Weeks explains to the judge what has occurred during his seizure. He secretly discovers the whereabouts of the veiled woman.

CHAPTER IV — The veiled woman proves to be the widow of a man tried before the judge and electrocuted for murder years before. Her daughter is engaged to the judge's son, from whom he is estranged, but the murder is between the lovers. The widow plans to clear her husband's memory and asks the judge's aid.

CHAPTER V—Alone in her room Deborah Scoville reads the newspaper clippings telling the story of the murder of Algernon Etheridge by John Scoville in Dark Hollow, twelve years before.

CHAPTER VI—The judge and Mrs. Scoville meet at Spencer's Folly and she shows him how, on the day of the murder, she saw the shadow of a man, whittling a stick and wearing a long-peaked cap, like her husband's. Until long afterward she did not know that her husband had not worn that cap on the fatal day. The judge engages her and her daughter Reuther to live with him in his mysterious home.

CHAPTER VII—Deborah and her lawyer, Black, go to the police station and see the stick used to murder Etheridge. She discovers a broken knife-blade point embedded in it. Deborah and Reuther go to live with the judge.

CHAPTER VIII—While cleaning the judge's study under his eye, Deborah sees a portrait of Oliver, the judge's son, with a black band painted across the eyes. That night she finds, in Oliver's room, a cap with a peak like the shadowed one, and a knife with a broken blade-point.

CHAPTER IX—Anonymous letters and a talk with Miss Weeks increase Deborah's suspicions and fears. She finds that Oliver was in the ravine on the murder night.

CHAPTER X—Black warns Deborah that her inquiries may have serious results and shows her other anonymous letters hinting at Oliver's guilt.

CHAPTER XI—In the court room the judge, partial in his charge on a murder trial, is handed an anonymous note and has another cataleptic seizure. The note is picked up and read aloud.

CHAPTER XII—A mob follows the judge to his home. Deborah tells him why suspicion has been aroused against Oliver.

CHAPTER XIII—The judge shows Deborah a statement written by Oliver years ago telling how he saw her husband murder Spencer at Spencer's Folly on the night the house was burned.

CHAPTER XIV—A vain attempt to silence the anonymous letter writer is made. The judge wires Oliver to come home and defend himself.

CHAPTER XV—Oliver cannot be found. Black and Reuther go in search of him.

CHAPTER XVI—Oliver is found but runs away again.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Dark Hollow.

Later, when the boards he had loosened in anticipation of this hour were all removed, they came upon a packet of closely written words hidden in the framework of the bed.

It read as follows:

Whosoever lays hands on this MS. will already be acquainted with my crime. If he would also know its cause and the full story of my hypocrisy, let him read these lines written, as it were, with my heart's blood.

I loved Algernon Etheridge; I shall never have a dearer friend. His odd ways, his lank, possibly ungainly, figure crowned by a head of scholarly refinement, his amiability when pleased, his irascibility when crossed, formed a character attractive to me from its very contradictions; and after my wife's death and before my son Oliver reached a companionable age, it was in my intercourse with this man I found my most solid satisfaction.

Yet we often quarreled. His dogmatism frequently ran counter to my views, and, being myself a man of quick and violent temper, hard words sometimes passed between us, to be forgotten the next minute in a handshake, or some other token of mutual esteem. These dissensions—if such they could be called—never took place except in the privacy of his study or mine. We thought too much of each other to display our differences of opinion abroad or even in the presence of Oliver; and however heated our arguments or whatever our topic we invariably parted friends, till one fateful night.

O God! that years of repentance, self-hatred and secret immolation can never undo the deed of an infuriated moment. Eternity may console, but it can never make me innocent of the blood of my heart's brother.

We had had our usual wordy disagreement over some petty subject in which he was no nearer wrong nor I any nearer right than we had been many times before; but for some reason I found it harder to pardon him. For the first time in our long acquaintance, I let Algernon Etheridge leave me, without any attempt at conciliation.

If only I had halted there! If, at sight of my empty study, I had not conceived the mad notion of waylaying him at the bridge for the hand-shake I missed, I might have been a happy man now, and Oliver—But why dwell upon these might-have-beens! What happened was this:

Disturbed in mind, and finding myself alone in the house, Oliver having evidently gone out while we two were disputing, I decided to follow out the impulse I have mentioned. Leaving by the rear, I went down the lane to the path which serves as a short cut to the bridge.

That I did this unseen by anybody is not so strange when you consider the hour, and how the only person then living in the lane was, in all probability, in her kitchen. It would have been better for me, little as I might have recognized it at the time, had she been where she could have witnessed both my going and coming and faced me with the fact.

John Scoville, in his statement, says that after giving up his search for his little girl he wandered up the ravine before taking the path back which led him through Dark Hollow. This was false, as well as the story he told of leaving his stick by the chestnut tree in the gully at foot of Ostrander lane. For I was on the spot, and I know the route by which he reached Dark Hollow and also through whose agency the stick came to be there.

Read and learn with what tricks the devil beguiles us men.

I was descending this path, heavily shadowed, as you know, by a skirting of closely growing trees and bushes, when just where it dips into the Hollow I heard the sound of a hasty foot come crashing up through the underbrush from the ravine and cross the path ahead of me. A turn in the path prevented me from seeing the man himself, but as you will perceive and as I perceived later when circumstances recalled it to my mind, I had no need to see him to know who it was or with what intent he took this method of escape from the ravine into the fields leading to the highway. Scoville's stick spoke for him, the stick which I presently tripped over and mechanically picked up, without a thought of the desperate use to which I was destined to put it.

Etheridge was coming. I could hear his whistle on Factory road. There was no mistaking it. It was unusually shrill one and had always been a cause of irritation to me, but at this moment it was more; it roused every antagonistic impulse within me. He whistling like a gallard, after a parting which had dissatisfied me to such an extent that I had come all this distance to ask his pardon and see his old smile again! Afterward, long afterward, I was able to give another interpretation to his show of apparent self-satisfaction, but then I saw nothing but the contrast it offered to my own tender regrets, and my blood began to boil and my temper rise to such a point that recrimination took the place of apology when in another moment we came together in the open space between the end of the bridge and Dark Hollow.

He was in no better mood than myself to encounter insult, and what had been a simple difference between us flamed into a quarrel which reached its culmination when he mentioned Oliver's name with a taunt, which the boy, for all his obstinate clinging to his journalistic idea, did not deserve.

Knowing my own temper, I drew back into the Hollow.

He followed me.

I tried to speak.

He took the word out of my mouth. This may have been with the intent of quelling my anger, but the tone was rasping, and, noting this and not his words, my hand tightened insensibly about the stick which the devil (or John Scoville) had put in my hand. Did he see this, or was he prompted by some old memory of boyish quarrels that he should give utterance to that quick, sharp laugh of scorn! I shall never know, but ere the sound had ceased the stick was whirling over my head—there came a crash and he fell. My friend! My friend!

Next moment the earth seemed too narrow, the heavens too contracted for my misery. That he was dead—that my blow had killed him, I never doubted for an instant. I knew it, as we know the face of Doom when once it has risen upon us. Never, never again would this lump of clay, which a few minutes before had filled the Hollow with shrillest whistling, breathe or think or speak. He was dead, dead, dead!—And I? What was I?

The name which no man hears unmoved, no amount of repetition makes easy to the tongue or welcome to the ear! . . . the name which I had heard launched in full forensic eloquence so many times in accusation against the wretches I had hardly regarded as being in the same human class as myself rang in my ears as though intoned from the very mouth of hell. I could not escape it. I should never be able to escape it again. Though I was standing in a familiar scene—a scene I had known and frequented from childhood, I felt myself as isolated from my past and as completely set apart from my fellows as the shipwrecked mariner tossed to precarious foothold on his wave-dashed rock. I forgot that other criminals existed.

In that one awful moment I was in my own eyes the only blot upon the universe—the sole inhabitant of the new world into which I had plunged—the world of crime—the world upon which I had sat in judgment before I knew—

What broke the spell? God knows; all I can say is that, drawn by some other will than my own, I found my glance traveling up the opposing bluff till at its top, framed between the ragged wall and towering chimney of Spencer's Folly, I saw the presence I had dreaded, the witness who was to undo me.

It was a woman—a woman with a little child in hand. I did not see her face, for she was just on the point of turning away from the dizzy verge, but nothing could have been plainer than the silhouette which these two made against the flush of that early evening sky.

As long as I could catch a glimpse of this woman's fluttering skirt as she retreated through the ruins, I stood there, self-convicted, above the man I had slain, staring up at that blotch of shining sky which was as the gate of hell to me. Not till their two figures had disappeared and it was quite clear again did the instinct of self-preservation return, and with it the thought of flight.

But where could I fly? No spot in the whole world was secret enough to conceal me now. I was a marked man. Better to stand my ground, and take the consequences than to act the coward's part and slink away like those other men of blood I had so often sat in judgment upon.

Had I but followed this impulse! Had I but gone among my fellows, shown them the mark of Cain upon my forehead and prayed, not for indulgence, but punishment, what days of gnawing misery I should have been spared!

The horror of what lay at my feet drove me from the Hollow. As my steps fell mechanically into the trail down which I had come in innocence and kindly purpose only a few minutes before, a startling thought shot through my benumbed mind. The woman had shown no haste in her turning! There had been a naturalness in her movement, a dignity and a grace which spoke of ease, not shock. What if she had not seen! What if my deed was as yet unknown! Might I not have time for—for what? I did not stop to think; I just pressed on saying to myself, "Let Providence decide. If I meet any one before I reach my own door my doom is settled. If I do not—"

And I did not. As I turned into the lane from the ravine I heard a sound far down the slope, but it was too distant to create apprehension, and I went calmly on, forcing myself into my usual leisurely gait, if only to gain some control over my own emotions before coming under Oscar's eye.

That sound I have never understood. It could not have been Scoville, since in the short time which had passed he could not have fled from the point where I heard him last into the ravine below Ostrander lane. But, if not he, who was it? Or if it was he, and some other hand threw his stick across my path, whose was this hand and why have we never heard anything about it? It is a question which sometimes floats through my mind, but I did not give it a thought then. I was within sight of home and Oliver's possible presence; and all other dread was as nothing in comparison to what I felt at the prospect of meeting my boy's eye. My boy's eye! my greatest dread then, and my greatest dread still! In my terror of it I walked as to my doom.

He [illegible] Dead, Dead, Dead—and I? [illegible] Was I?

The house, which I had left empty, I found empty; Oliver had not yet returned. The absolute stillness of the rooms seemed appalling. Instinctively I looked at the clock. It had stopped. Not at the minute—I do not say it was at the minute—but near, very near the time when from an innocent man I became a guilty one. Appalled at the discovery, I fled to the front. Opening the door, I looked out. Not a creature in sight, and not a sound to be heard. The road was as lonely and seemingly as forsaken as the house. Had time stopped here, too? Were the world and its interests at a pause in horror of my deed? For a moment I believed it; then more natural sensations intervened, and, rejoicing at this lack of disturbance where disturbance meant discovery, I stepped inside again, rewound the clock, and sat down in my own room. My own room! Was it mine any longer? Its walls looked strange; the petty objects of my daily handling, unfamiliar. The change in myself infected everything I saw. I might have been in another man's house for all connection these things seemed to have with me or my life. Like one set apart on an unapproachable shore, I stretched hands in vain toward all that I had known and all that had been of value to me.

But as the minutes passed I began to lose this feeling. Hope, which I thought quite dead, slowly revived. Nothing had happened, and perhaps nothing would.

Men had been killed before, and the slayer passed unrecognized. Why might it not be so in my case? If the woman continued to remain silent; if for any reason she had not witnessed the blow or the striker, who else was there to connect me with an assault committed a quarter of a mile away? No one knew of the quarrel; and if they did, who could be so daring as to associate one of my name with an action so brutal? A judge slay his friend! It would take evidence of a very marked character to make even my political enemies believe that.

As the twilight deepened I rose from my seat and lit the gas. I must not be found skulking in the dark. Then I began to count the ticks measuring off the hour. If thirty minutes more passed without a rush from without I might hope. If twenty?—if ten?—then it was five! then it was—

Ah! The gate had clanged to. They were coming. I could hear steps—voices—a loud ring at the bell. I moved slowly toward the front. I feared the betrayal which my ashy face and trembling hands might make. Agitation after the news was to be expected, but not before! So I left the hall dark when I opened the door. And thus decided my future.

A ROMANCE IN DUPLICATE

Happy Ending of a Mixed Up Love Affair.

Henry and Howard Corwith loved each other devotedly. Henry was four years older than Howard, but looked younger. He had been injured when a child, and this had retarded his development. When he was seven years old a cyclone passed over the town where they lived, leaving the swath of a gigantic scythe behind it. The brothers had been left alone in the house, Henry in charge of it and of his little brother Howard. At the time of the passage of the whirlwind Howard was asleep. Feeling the house crashing down upon them, Henry planted himself above his younger brother to protect him. When several hours later they were taken out from under the fallen timbers, Howard was found to be unhurt, but Henry had received severe injuries.

And now at twenty-six and twenty-two respectively Henry was small and thin and pale, Howard a well developed, stalwart man. Henry felt the same affection for his brother as when he had saved him from death. Howard lived under a constant reminder of the sacrifice Henry had made for him, and it was his aim to heap benefits upon the brother who had taken the burden that had permitted his own development. Howard was never so well pleased as at discovering some want of Henry's that he could supply.

Fortunately they both fell in love at the same time and with sisters. Henry became engaged to Delia Martin and Howard soon after became engaged to her sister Belle. It was said that Howard proposed to the sister of his brother's fiancee to save himself from being left with no one to love. However this may be, both brothers seemed satisfied.

Henry Corwith, deprived of the physique with which to live a strenuous life, found compensation in art. After learning all of his profession that could be drawn from American preceptors he resolved to go abroad to study. Belle Martin possessed musical taste and concluded to take a course of music in Germany. It was agreed that the two should cross the ocean in the same vessel, and upon arrival Henry was to go to Paris, Belle to Berlin. They sailed in the autumn and were to return the following summer.

Howard Corwith endured the separation from his brother and his fiancee as best he could. Howard and Delia had a common interest and naturally turned to each other for comfort. Each found in the other a listener into whose ear to pour a story of enforced separation. Howard talked of Belle, and Delia talked of Henry. The interchange of sympathy was perfect.

Ten months passed. Henry and Belle wrote that they would meet in Southampton and return on the same steamer. Howard's friends, when apprised of his brother's and his fiancee's return, congratulated him warmly, but Howard, instead of looking happy over the approaching reunion, wore a troubled look. As the time for the absent ones' return drew near this evidence of some secret dread increased, and on the day of the arrival Howard seemed threatened with nervous prostration.

Delia Martin went to New York to meet her sister, the two girls having arranged to pass a few days in the city. Howard Corwith sent word that he was not well enough to go on to meet his brother and his fiancee, and Henry on reaching port took the first train home. Howard drove to the station for him. At their meeting Henry noticed that Howard looked right past him, avoiding meeting his eye. Henry sighed and bent his head. The pressure of hands was cold and the meeting entirely devoid of warmth. As they drove home together Henry said:

"Fletcher came to see you, I suppose, and brought you the commissions I gave him for you?"

"Yes."

Henry sighed and gazed far away.

"Fletcher told me all about you," said Howard.

"So I supposed," said Henry.

"It was a pleasant season for you and Belle to be together in Switzerland."

"Fletcher spoke of it?"

"Yes."

By this time they reached the house and, alighting, went into the library, where they had so often smoked and talked and exchanged confidences. Then Henry said:

"Howard, this thing is killing you."

"How did you know it?" Howard asked, quickly looking up at his brother.

"I knew Fletcher would give you the facts," replied Henry without noticing the question. "I saw what was on your mind the moment I arrived."

"You are right in assuming that it is killing me. To think that you who have borne the burden for me all these years and always bear it should have such a brother!"

"What do you mean, Howard?"

"I mean that I am a dog. You know it as well as I. But what could I do? We have been thrown together constantly ever since you and Belle went away. I thought I loved Belle. Now I know I love Delia. I have robbed you of her."

Henry went to his brother and threw his arms around his neck. "If you don't know it already," he said, "I'll tell you that I've robbed you of Belle."

"Great heavens! Suppose either of us had proved faithful!"

Where He Had to Stop.

"There's a child among you, taking notes," said the poker player as the man next to him drew down a big pot. "Yes, but he daren't print 'em," chuckled the man who had just been "called" for his roll.

A ROMANCE IN DUPLICATE

Happy Ending of a Mixed Up Love Affair.

Henry and Howard Corwith loved each other devotedly. Henry was four years older than Howard, but looked younger. He had been injured when a child, and this had retarded his development. When he was seven years old a cyclone passed over the town where they lived, leaving the swath of a gigantic scythe behind it. The brothers had been left alone in the house, Henry in charge of it and of his little brother Howard. At the time of the passage of the whirlwind Howard was asleep. Feeling the house crashing down upon them, Henry planted himself above his younger brother to protect him. When several hours later they were taken out from under the fallen timbers, Howard was found to be unhurt, but Henry had received severe injuries.

And now at twenty-six and twenty-two respectively Henry was small and thin and pale, Howard a well developed, stalwart man. Henry felt the same affection for his brother as when he had saved him from death. Howard lived under a constant reminder of the sacrifice Henry had made for him, and it was his aim to heap benefits upon the brother who had taken the burden that had permitted his own development. Howard was never so well pleased as at discovering some want of Henry's that he could supply.

Fortunately they both fell in love at the same time and with sisters. Henry became engaged to Delia Martin and Howard soon after became engaged to her sister Belle. It was said that Howard proposed to the sister of his brother's fiancee to save himself from being left with no one to love. However this may be, both brothers seemed satisfied.

Henry Corwith, deprived of the physique with which to live a strenuous life, found compensation in art. After learning all of his profession that could be drawn from American preceptors he resolved to go abroad to study. Belle Martin possessed musical taste and concluded to take a course of music in Germany. It was agreed that the two should cross the ocean in the same vessel, and upon arrival Henry was to go to Paris, Belle to Berlin. They sailed in the autumn and were to return the following summer.

Howard Corwith endured the separation from his brother and his fiancee as best he could. Howard and Delia had a common interest and naturally turned to each other for comfort. Each found in the other a listener into whose ear to pour a story of enforced separation. Howard talked of Belle, and Delia talked of Henry. The interchange of sympathy was perfect.

Ten months passed. Henry and Belle wrote that they would meet in Southampton and return on the same steamer. Howard's friends, when apprised of his brother's and his fiancee's return, congratulated him warmly, but Howard, instead of looking happy over the approaching reunion, wore a troubled look. As the time for the absent ones' return drew near this evidence of some secret dread increased, and on the day of the arrival Howard seemed threatened with nervous prostration.

Delia Martin went to New York to meet her sister, the two girls having arranged to pass a few days in the city. Howard Corwith sent word that he was not well enough to go on to meet his brother and his fiancee, and Henry on reaching port took the first train home. Howard drove to the station for him. At their meeting Henry noticed that Howard looked right past him, avoiding meeting his eye. Henry sighed and bent his head. The pressure of hands was cold and the meeting entirely devoid of warmth. As they drove home together Henry said:

"Fletcher came to see you, I suppose, and brought you the commissions I gave him for you?"

"Yes."

Henry sighed and gazed far away.

"Fletcher told me all about you," said Howard.

"So I supposed," said Henry.

"It was a pleasant season for you and Belle to be together in Switzerland."

"Fletcher spoke of it?"

"Yes."

By this time they reached the house and, alighting, went into the library where they had so often smoked and talked and exchanged confidences. Then Henry said:

"Howard, this thing is killing you."

"How did you know it?" Howard asked, quickly looking up at his brother.

"I knew Fletcher would give you the facts," replied Henry without noticing the question. "I saw what was on your mind the moment I arrived."

"You are right in assuming that it is killing me. To think that you who have borne the burden for me all these years and always bear it should have such a brother!"

"What do you mean, Howard?"

"I mean that I am a dog. You know it as well as I. But what could I do? We have been thrown together constantly ever since you and Belle went away. I thought I loved Belle. Now I know I love Delia, I have robbed you of her."

Henry went to his brother and threw his arms around his neck. "If you don't know it already," he said, "I'll tell you that I've robbed you of Belle."

"Great heavens! Suppose either of us had proved faithful!"

Where He Had to Stop.

"There's a child among you taking notes," said the poker player as the man next to him drew down a big pot. "Yes, but he daren't print 'em," chuckled the man who had just been "called" for his roll.

Would Hardly Call It a Privilege.

"I noted a new meaning of the word 'privilege' the other day," said J. Fuller Gloom. "The article said it was a man's privilege to pay for a woman stranger's meals on short railroad trips. Personally I do not see, with the customary high prices on a dining car, how anyone could consider the paying anything more than an extreme effort."—Kansas City Star.
